THE MEREDITH EAGLE.

VOL. IV. MEREDITH, N. H., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1883. NO. 181.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY.

Year after year unto her feet—
She lying on her couch alone—
Across the purpled coverlet,
The maiden's jet black hair has grown—
On either side her tranced form
Forth streaming from a braid of pearl;
The slumbrous light is rich and warm,
And moves not on the rounded curl.

The silk-star broider'd coverlid
Unto her limbs itself doth mold
Languidly ever, and, amid
Her full black ringlets downward roll'd
Glows forth each softly shadowed arm
With bracelets of the diamond bright;
Her constant beauty doth inform
Stillness with love, and day with light.

She sleeps: her breathings are not heard
In palace-chambers far apart.
The fragrant tresses are not stirred
That lie upon her charmed heart.
She sleeps; on either hand upswells
The gold-fringed pillow lightly prest;
She sleeps, nor dreams, but ever dwells
A perfect form in perfect rest.

TENNYSON.

THRILLING WOLF STORY

Rube Wexford ought to have been a happy fellow. He was certainly considered one on the day when Kate Wilde became his bride. He was the envy of every young man in the rude Western hamlet where the ceremony took place, and many were the good wishes showered on the heads of the newly-wedded pair for their future happiness and prosperity. Still there were those who not only insinuated but boasted that the helpmate of her choice was not worthy the woman he had won. Kate's father and mother were particularly opposed to the match, and did all in their power to prevent it, but the girl, besides her unwavering love, possessed a determined will which, when once aroused, carried much before it. Rube Wexford was never accounted a strictly temperate man. Indeed, there had been times before marriage when he was for days under the influence of liquor, and Kate had seen him in this state and therefore knew fully the extent of his weakness. But the woman loved the man, and within herself resolved that his reclamation should be her duty. That success must crown her efforts she little doubted.

Autumn drifted away, the crops had been gathered in and all the indications pointed to an early and severe winter. Rube's sprees continued. No wind was too cold, no snow too deep to keep him from Washburn's, a not distant tavern. One evening in the latter part of December he took down his leggings and gun from the pegs where they hung and was preparing to go out. Kate went to him and said:

"Rube, you must not leave me to-night. Give in to me this time and stay at home."

"I am only going for a jaunt," he replied. "I'll be back soon."

"No, you are going to Washburn's. To-night you will, you must gratify me. I am afraid to remain here alone."

"Afraid?" he answered. Such a thing as fear was almost unknown to Kate Wilde.

She clasped her arms around his neck, whispered into his ear, her cheeks flushing brightly, then sat down in the rocker and cried as if her heart would break. Rube stood the gun in a corner, threw aside the leggings and cried too.

The next morning when the winter sun beamed upon the cabin, the log shelter held three souls instead of two. A wee stranger had come in the night, a bright-eyed baby girl. Her weak cry seemed to move all the better part of the husband's nature, and his wife looked on with a new-born confidence in her face. After a week, when Kate was able to sit up, Rube went to relate the happy event to his grand-parents. It was the first time he had visited them for months. Very early in the morning he started, and when the afternoon shadows began to lengthen Kate looked out eagerly for his return. It was toward daybreak when he appeared, his hands and feet almost frozen, and his senses stupefied by liquor. The wife's new hopes were destined to be short lived. Freshly-made promises marked the morrow, but days went by only to see them unfulfilled. Now there was a new torture. Rube had forsaken Washburn's, and made his visits to Pineville instead, where Kate's father and mother lived. It was almost more than the woman's nature could bear to know that her parents were the frequent witnesses of her husband's disgrace. This was a sort of thing which she could not and would not long brook.

Little Kate, the baby, was a month old to a day when Rube made preparations one morning for a trip to Pineville. Kate looked on silently for a few moments, and then said:

"Where are you going?"

"Only to Pineville."

"What for?"

"To see about some powder and stuff."

"That is untrue. You are going to spend the day with worthless companions, and you will come back stupid with liquor. Rube, listen to me. I have stood all it is possible for me to endure. I have prayed and entreated you to abandon a habit which has disgraced us both. My pleadings have brought nothing. I cannot and will not have our child grow up to know a father who is a drunkard. If you refuse to stay at home, I have said my last say. Go to Pineville if you insist on doing so, but if you are not here sober by sunset I shall go with the baby to father's, and in this house I will never set foot again."

"That's all talk," Rube answered, in a rough, joking, half-serious fashion. "Why, it's fifteen miles to Pineville."

"No matter," was the firm rejoinder. "I will make the start if the child and I freeze to death by the way."

"Look out for wolves," Rube laughed again. "There has been half a dozen seen lately. It has been a hard winter on them, and they're most starved."

"Wolves or no wolves," muttered Kate, "I'll go."

Rube hung about the house uneasily for an hour or so, then rigged himself out, leggings, buffalo coat, gun, and all. Kake worked away and said never a word. He opened the door, and, without looking back, remaked:

"I'll be here by sunset."

"See that you are," was the reply. "If you come here later the house will be empty."

The wife watched his form across the clearing, and saw it disappear in the heavy timber which circled the cabin. She turned to her household duties, but had no heart for them. Well she knew Rube Wexford would break his last promise, as he had broken others before it. If so, he must abide by the result. She was determined.

The day went by at a snail's pace, and the afternoon seemed never ending. Kate fondled the baby, listened to her crow and cry, and fed her a dozen times. Then she prepared supper, and sunset came when it was completed. But it brought no Rube. Another hour and still he was absent. So the moments passed until the clock struck 10. The baby was fast asleep. Kate rose from a chair at the cradle's side, a look of firm determination on her face, and opening the cabin door, she peered across the clearing. Not a soul was visible. She closed the door, went to the chest, and took from it a pair of old fashioned skates, whose steel runners gleamed in the firelight. She laid them ready for use and proceeded to wrap herself as warmly as possible. Then she bundled the baby in the same manner, lifted her tenderly in her arms, and with the skates slung over her shoulder, started across the clearing. After reaching the timber she left the beaten path and made for the river. It was coated heavily with ice, and the winds had blown it almost entirely free from snow, leaving a nearly naked surface. Kate laid the baby down for a few moments while she fastened on her skates. Then she lifted her baby once more and started for Pineville, 15 miles away. The moon shone brightly, she was a wonderfully rapid skater, and she knew no slightest suspicion of fear.

Rube Wexford sat near the warm fire which was surrounded by a dozen men beside himself. He had been there for hours listening to anecdotes of hunter's lives, even adding to the general fund with some of his own experiences, but though his companions coaxed and persuaded him, they could not prevail upon him to taste liquor. This was something so entirely new that many a laugh and joke was had at his expense. He answered all persuasions to imbibe in the same way, saying only. "Not to-day, boys; not to-day."

When sunset came he was still in his seat. He wanted to be at home, he wanted to keep his promise, but he thought he would wait awhile and start later, so as it would not look to Kate too much as if he were giving in. So thinking he went to a quiet corner by himself, and had not been there long before he fell asleep. It was eleven o'clock when he awoke with a start, and said hurriedly:

"What is it, Kate?"

A loud roar of laughter brought him to his senses, and a rough voice cried:

"Rube, guess you have been dreaming."

"Yes," he replied, foolishly; "I thought my wife was calling me."

He glanced at the clock and said:

"Boys, I must go."

"Have something before you leave," was the general cry.

"No, no; not to-night."

Then he was gone. His conscience smote him as he trudged through the snow. It would be after 2 o'clock when he reached home. One thing consoled him somewhat; he was sober. But would Kate be in the cabin when he returned? Of course, she must be. Nothing short of madness could tempt her to keep the rash vow she made in the morning. So thought Rube. This was because he was incapable of estimating the great suffering which he had caused his wife.

On he went until through the stillness of the night was borne to his ears the sound of falling waters. It proceeded from a spot which marked the half-way between Pineville and his own home and was caused by the river tumbling down a steep descent of 15 or 20 feet of rugged rock. His road at this point lay close to the river bank, and soon he was in full view of the cascade. As he passed it he noticed with a sort of shudder how cold and dark the water looked as it tumbled down. For thirty feet above the falls there was no ice. It broke off abruptly, and the current rushed from beneath with terrible velocity. Beyond in the moonlight glistened an unbroken surface of clear ice for fully half a mile before there was a bend in the river's bank.

The sight was an old one to Rube, and he paid little heed to it, but stalked on silently, still thinking of Kate and wondering would the cabin be tenantless. Suddenly he stood stock still and listened. Many an ear would have heard nothing but the sound of rushing waters. Rube's acute and practiced hearing detected something more, and he felt instinctively for his ammunition and looked to the priming of his rifle. Then from a distance the sound came again—a peculiar cry, followed by another and another, until they ended in a chorus of unearthly yells. Rube muttered to himself one word—wolves—and strained his eyes in the direction of the curve to the river's edge. The cry proceeded from that direction and grew louder every instant.

Before he could decide on a plan of action there shot out from the bend in the river what looked to him like a woman carrying a bundle and skating for dear life. She strained every nerve, but never once cried out. Next came a wolf, followed rapidly by others, which swelled the pack to a dozen, all ravenous, yelping, snarling, and gaining closely on their prey. Rube raised his rifle, fired, and began to load as he had never loaded before. The cries came nearer and nearer. Great God! the wolves were upon the woman. It seemed as if no earthly hope could save her, when, quick as an arrow from a bow, she swerved to one side, the maddened brutes slid forward on their hind legs and she had gained a few steps. Again she flew onward, and again she tried the ruse of swerving aside, the man on the bank in the meantime firing rapidly, and picking off wolf after wolf. A fresh danger arose. The woman evidently did not see the abrupt break in the ice above the falls, and the dark, swift current which lay beyond. Perhaps she was too frightened to hear the rushing waters. On she went, making straight for the falls, the wolves almost on her heels, and the man's voice crying in terrified accents as he dropped on his knee in the snow:

"Kate! Kate! My God save her!"

The woman was on the brink of the ice, when she made a sudden sweep to one side. Nearly the entire pack, unable to check their mad flight, plunged into the water, which carried them swiftly over the rocks, and Kate Wexford was flying toward the river bank, where she fell helpless in the snow, her baby in her arms, while Rube's rifle frightened the remainder of her pursuers away. It was some time before she could answer her husband's voice. When strength enabled her to do so she arose feebly in the snow, her resolution to go to her father as strong as ever, but Rube took her hand, knelt down, and said:

"Kate, bear with me for the last time. As God is my judge I shall never again taste liquor. This night has taught me a lesson which I cannot forget."

Kate believed him and accepted his promise. They then started for Pineville, Rube carrying the baby, and more than half carrying his wife. When they arrived there Kate told her parents she had been dying to show them the baby, and taking advantage of the moonlight night, had made the journey on skates.

Rube kept his vow, the roses bloomed again on Kate's cheeks, and to-day a happy family of boys and girls feel no touch of shame as they look up with pride to their father.

A Child's Prayer Quickly Answered.

Something stayed his feet; there was a fire in the grate within—for the night was chill—and it lit up the little parlor and brought out in startling effects the pictures on the wall. But these were as nothing to the picture on the hearth. There, by the soft glow of the firelight, knelt his little child at her mother's feet, its fair head bowed, and as its rosy lips uttered each word with childish distinctness the father listened, spell-bound to the spot.

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

Sweet innocence. The man himself who stood there with bearded lips shut tightly together had said that prayer once at his mother's knee. Where was that mother now? The sunset gates had long ago unbarred to let her pass through. But the child had not finished; he heard her say:—"God bless mamma, papa and my own self"—then there was a pause, and she lifted troubled blue eyes to her mother's face.

"God bless papa," prompted the mother, softly.

"God bless papa," lisped the little one.

"And—please send him home sober." He could not bear the mother as she said this, but the child followed in a clear, inspired tone:—

"God—bless papa—and please—send him—home—sober. Amen."

Mother and child sprang to their feet in alarm when the door opened so suddenly, but they were not afraid when they saw who it was, returned so soon; but that night, when little Mamie was being tucked up in bed after such a romp with papa she said in the sleepiest and most contented of voices:

"Mamma, God answers most as quick as the telephone, doesn't He?"

They Sold Him a Hole.

He was telling the story in the billiard room of a Denver hotel. Said he:

"There were three of us, you see, and Nevada was a cold climate for us. We were dead-broke, half-starved, and clear discouraged, when along came a New Yorker. He wouldn't play cards, wouldn't be robbed, and we couldn't stick him with forged land-patents or bogus preemptions. One day we trailed out and dug a hole into a hill and salted it a bit, and rushed back and offered the New Yorker the big discovery for $3,000 cash down."

"And he bit?"

"Took right hold like a pair of pincers. Why, he never even stopped to beat us down. We got a cool thousand apiece and made for 'Frisco."

"Purty cool that was."

"Well, I dunno. If there was anything cool in that transaction it was the way that New Yorker hunted up a pard, set miners to work, bought machinery, and took over $750,000 out of that 'ar hole inside of eight months! Maybe we've got over feeling flat, but I guess not."—Wall Street News.

BOYS.—Dubuque has a boys' fraternity, the members of which are divided into four classes. The first demands only pledge against intoxicating drink, the second adds tobacco, the third profanity, and the fourth everything in the shape of vice or crime. The oath of the latter class is elaborate and terrible.

OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

A SUBJECT DEAR TO THE HEART OF EVERY TRUE MAN.

Two Pictures That it Will be Well to Take a Good Look At.

[From the Milwaukee Sun.]

In a recent publication was an engraving entitled "The Old Folks at Home." It represented an aged couple sitting together reading a letter which lay on the table before them. The aged mother, with a smiling face, was whispering something to the pleasant faced father. There must have been good news in that letter. It may have been from their boy—we are always boys and girls to father and mother—telling of his success thus far in the battle of life. Maybe it was from a loved daughter, writing to father and mother, telling them how much her little ones talked of grandpa and grandma. It was a beautiful picture of a subject dear to the heart of every true man and woman. The old folks at home, in this picture, were just what they should have been—happy. It was, aside from an artistic view, a picture that would attract and delight the eye.

Another picture is painted to the mind. It is the same subject. In place of smiles there are tears coursing down the furrowed cheeks. An expression of anxious care takes the place of pleasure, as they gaze on the letter before them. That letter contains bad news from those whom these two aged hearts, in the years gone by, had hoped would prove an honor and blessing to their father and mother in their old age. Now all this bright coloring of a happy old age gives way to the dark colors of life that make Death welcome and the grave a flowery bed of ease. These are true pictures of the old folks at home in every community.

Looking at the aged mother's face, love for her child shines forth under all, no matter how trying, circumstances. In the criminal court of Chicago, recently, a young man was tried and convicted for a capital crime. The mother had sat with her boy all through the trial. She had heard all the evidence for and against him. She had listened to the arguments of counsel for and against her son, and when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty she could no longer restrain herself and in her despair and excitement arose and denounced in frenzied words the court, hoping only to save her boy. Blinded by love that mother could see no ill in her son, though he belonged to that class of things which infest all large cities. No one can estimate a mother's love. It descends deeper, it reaches higher, it is broader and more charitable than all things else of creation. No matter how low and depraved a child may become, mother's love goes out to that child with the same force as it would had that child grown up and the mother had realized all her fond hopes for its future.

How many young men who are away from the old folks at home think of mothers' love? When tempted to do a questionable act think of mother. If evil companions entice you it will help you to resist temptation. If the young men of America who are out in the world striving to make a competency would only keep the picture of the old folks at home, especially mother's picture, constantly in their hearts there would be fewer mothers laid to rest in broken hearted graves and much less crime to record. Boys, don't go back on the old folks at home. Stand firm by the principles mother taught, for it is to mother all credit is due for what good there is in us.

Abuses by the Press.

The New York Hour, in speaking of the notoriously sensational articles that disgrace the press of late, says: Another odious result of this taking the public along on the hunt is the opportunity it offers to unscrupulous detectives to levy blackmail. If that nefarious business has not been carried on in connection with this particular case, then appearances are sadly deceitful. The most outrageous statements have been published in the papers of this city, which were furnished by the detectives apparently for the purpose of frightening one or two wealthy men into shutting the mouths either of the detectives or the reporters—probably both. The stories, as printed, were ridiculously improbable; nevertheless they were of a kind which a man with money would willingly pay well not to have published. The daily press of this city is in a great measure responsible for the present state of affairs in this case as in most others. They sent reporters to the scene of the murder—for what purpose? To tell the main story of the crime, and describe what took place at the public sessions of the coroner's jury? Certainly all that; but much more. Each reporter knew perfectly well when he left this city on the work, that his place on his paper did not depend upon his telling what it was proper the public should know, but upon his telling just those things which the public had no business to want to know, at least at that stage of the game. For example, if the Times published one day a story which the Herald or Tribune did not have also (no matter how improbable), or which the Herald or the Tribune could not match by another equally sensational, the reporters of the last two papers knew perfectly well that they would be abused high and low in their respective offices for "being beaten," and perhaps they would even lose their places. And still it might be that the Times's story had lie and blackmail written all over the face of it. This is supposing an extreme case; but it illustrates the point. In a word, the insane fear in the offices of our great journals of being "beaten" is at the bottom of most of the abuses of which the press of this country is guilty at the present day.

CHANGES IN WHEAT CULTURE.

Modern Wheat Growing.

Wheat is getting to be an important crop in sections of the country where its culture a few years ago was confined to here and there, a farmer who clung with persistent tenacity to the maxim of the fathers that "farmers must raise their own bread." The changes in the management of the crop are interesting. Wheat was formerly sown in August or the first week in September. Very little was, however, put in as late as September. The ground was fitted by summer-fallowing and with manure rotted in the barn-yard and harrowed in with the seed. After weevil became so plenty as to damage the crop, varieties with chaff thicker and closer fitting were found, upon which the weevil larvæ could not work so well, and so the period of wheat-growing was extended. The old Mediterranean wheat—a Russian variety—became the farmers' dependence, and while at first it made inferior flour as compared with the old kinds, still it was wheat and became the universal crop because almost weevil-proof. It improved rapidly with continued culture and has been the basis of many other improved varieties. It was very hardy and productive, resembling the modern Clawson in these respects, but, unlike it, was red. When the Hessian fly became troublesome its habits were studied and later sowing was found to be an effective remedy, as the career of the fly ended before the wheat was large enough for it to deposit its eggs, where they remained until the next year to hatch and feed upon the juices of the stems. The last and conquering enemy to wheat was the earth itself, which, with all the painstaking, refused to return a remunerative crop, and wheat-growing marched westward to newer and less exhausted lands.

After a rest of more than a quarter of a century, the soil with renewed strength now gives forth fine crops and the fathers would be astonished could they know that thirty and even forty bushels are now sometimes gathered from an acre on the same land which produced little more, if anything, than the seed. The method of culture has changed. There is now but little summer-following, as the improved cultivators render successive plowing unnecessary, and August is passed as unsuited to wheat. The best crops are now obtained by later sowing and the latter part of September is considered the proper time. My wheat was not put in until October 6, as the ground was too dry to plow until that time. It is sown on clover sod, which is well adapted to the crop, and drilled in seven pecks to the acre with 200 pounds of super-phosphate and no other manure. It is a notion of farmers that leaving the surface of the ground uneven, after the drill, is an advantage as it keeps the snow from blowing off. There is force in this, but there is another fact which should be considered at the same time. Wheat will do better if the ground is not too loose or mellow. It should be compact or firm, the opposite of loose, and at the same time not hard or crusty. When the ground is just right the wheat will do better. This fact has been tested by following the different methods. The principle is that when the ground is made firm or well settled about the seed it will take root sooner, grow faster and stand both frost and drouth better.

Wheat should always have the earth settled firmly around it, as this will prevent the winter winds from blowing the earth away from the roots. It is therefore a nice question whether the wheat ground should always be rolled when sown. My wheat was rolled, as the ground was very mellow, and by so doing, I am sure there will be a gain of a week in the growth. It may be said that rolling will make the ground hard and crusty on the surface. It will not, unless it is wet, and it never should be rolled when in this condition. An advance has been made in wheat-culture by harrowing it in spring. This is a modern improvement which should be most generally adopted. The grass seed should be sown on it just as soon as the surface becomes dry enough, no matter whether the frost is all out or not, and a good harrowing given to it. This will break up the crust so many farmers are afraid of if they compact the soil in autumn, and at the same time it will cover the grass seed and insure a good "catch," which will pay for all the trouble. Wheat is wonderfully improved by a spring harrowing. I am wondering whether we can keep up the fertility of the soil for wheat without a break, as has occurred when the earth seemed to be exhausted for its growth. If half that is said about the wonderful virtues of super-phosphates is true then we can grow wheat ad infinitum by their use. I would rather, however, but my faith in a three-years', or better yet, a four-years' rotation, with a liberal dressing of barn-yard manure, combining both animal excrement and rotted provender, using plaster and clover in turn.—F. D. CURTIS, Kirby Homestead, N. Y.

Pork Abroad.

With all the exaggeration sometimes found in Western stories of the ravages of trichinosis, nothing has ever been dreamed of in this country like the experience now reported from Saxony. Deaths daily of persons suffering from the pork disease; four hundred persons ill with it in ten villages, and fifty of them in a hopeless condition; one hundred and eighty cases in Ermsleben alone—surely nothing like this was ever known here, and yet American hogs are now prohibited from entering Germany. The fair inference seems to be that there are no points of disease about American pork materially different from those of any other pork.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

THE COACH IN WHICH Banker Jamison of Philadelphia is traveling in Pennsylvania with his family is described by an exchange: "The outside has seats for three in front and two back; two large lamps are on each side of the front seat, and one large head light is on the dash-board. Here also are a clock, an ax, a knife, a pistol, and other things. On the left side of the coach, near the box, is a private locker containing viands. On top is a large willow trunk, immediately back of which the tent, camp chairs, and blankets are stored. Under the back steps is a place for another large willow trunk, hanging behind which is a stepladder to be used by ladies when taking seats on the outside of the coach. Inside the boot all kinds of cooking utensils are packed. On the sides of the coach are willow cases for canes, umbrellas, fishing rods, and guns. Inside are two roomy seats facing each other, accommodating six persons. In the cushions of the doors are map pockets, and on the cushioned walls hang a thermometer, a barometer, a compass, a clock, night lamp, a match box, and near the top are racks filled with note paper and envelopes. The vehicle weighs only 1,370 pounds; and the reins are handled by the owner, who generally makes from twenty-five to forty miles daily. The party go into camp at 12 o'clock. The horses are then picketed and the camp fire is kindled."

IT BEGINS TO LOOK as though the bent arm of Massachusetts which stretches out into the atlantic would at last really be severed, on the surface, from the main body of the State. Dredges and pile drivers are already on the line of the canal, and it is promised that 500 laborers shall at once follow. It must be remembered, however, that this enterprise, two or three years ago, had advanced still further than now, and then failed. But the last Legislature granted a charter to a company which is believed to have both the means and the energy for pushing through, at last, this famous project, for which plans were drawn more than a century ago, and which has been under consideration about two centuries.

A PHYSICIAN WHO WRITES for the Continent about the curative powers of nature is positive in his conviction that it is better for a consumptive to stay at home, where he can be comfortable, than subject himself to the discomfort of hotel life, or to the greater inconvenience of a camp. He says that the camp cure may be fairly tried by sleeping on one's own housetop. Another medical man replies that the summer conditions of spruce forests are eminently favorable, and consumptives have recovered in the most surprising way living under canvas in them, where the air is impregnated with the healing emanations peculiar to the nondeciduous tree growths. There are consumptives whose lungs crave the salt of the ocean; others to whom the dry atmosphere of Colorado is infinitely soothing; and others again who are benefited by the climate of Florida or southern California. "To prescribe Florida for one person might mean death, while if he went among the northern paradise of spruce recovery might follow."

THE WEST HAS DRAWN the young blood out of the Green Mountain State. The Rutland Herald says: "There are many deserted farms and decayed towns in southern Vermont; at least, that is the testimony of an intelligent farm-bred lawyer who recently personally visited the towns that touch both sides of the Green Mountains from the Massachusetts line to Addison county. The woodland has so encroached upon these deserted farms that our friend is confident that there is more woodland to-day in the mountain towns of Vermont than there has been at any previous time in the past forty years. In the old counties of Bennington, Windham, Windsor and Rutland there are many deserted farms and decayed towns along both sides of the mountain range, and these deserted farms are not being reoccupied by any returning wanderer, although most of the towns are places of much natural beauty and attractiveness."

OPIUM IS SURREPTITIOUSLY supplied by San Francisco Chinamen to their countrymen in the Sandwich Islands, where it is forbidden. The drug brings $80 to $90 a pound, and the smuggling of a few hundred pounds makes a Chinaman rich. In numberless ways they contrive to introduce it. A large safe was consigned to a merchant. An officer demanded that it be opened. The Chinaman declared that he had forgotten the combination. That night the safe, weighing four tons, was taken out of the bonded warehouse, carted away several miles, emptied, and left in a sugar cane field, where the officers found it the next day, with evidence that it had been crammed with opium. A man had a contract for washing the linen of the Pacific Mail steamers. Hundreds of bundles, each containing a can of opium, were pitched from the steamer's deck to the wharf, and carted to the laundry. He happened to be sick on one occasion, and his assistant, who was ignorant of the contraband trade, handled the linen in such a way that the opium can fell out. A great number of sewing machines were sent to Honolulu, and by accident it was discovered that the legs were hollow and packed with opium. Opium has been delivered in the islands in fruit cans, the can being divided into three compartments, the two outside ones filled with fruit and the larger ones with opium. Large quantities have also been shipped to the islands in stove wood, each piece of the wood being bored. Masses of coal have done service in the same way.

THAT IS A LURID picture of criminal life in New York that is unveiled in the story of the killing of two thieves in a terrible fight in a Sixth avenue resort kept by a criminal for criminals. It is startling to think, says the Sun, that such desperate men come and go at will, mingling by day with the throngs of honest men and women in the busy thoroughfares, and at night gathering to plot crimes against society. The report that detectives kept nightly watch on their meeting place affords some assurance of protection, but it would seem as though men of such character might by some means be driven from the city.

A VERY BEAUTIFUL and touching story was telegraphed the other day from some far Western town, which told how a white dove flew in at a church window and lit upon the shoulder of a fair young bride who was just being given away at the altar. The poetic thrill which was caused by the incident has been turned into grief by the discovery that the fair young bride spent over six months training the dove for this matrimonial act with the one blessed purpose of getting her name in all the papers.

WHAT TO MARRY.

Not Wealth nor Beauty, but Virtue, Truth and Sincere Affection.

Rev. C. C. Goss delivered in New York an interesting sermon on "The Mistakes Respecting Courtship and Marriage."

The importance of the subject, the preacher said, can only be appreciated by those familiar with the infelicities of married life. Our public journals teem with incidents of domestic troubles. Divorce is getting to be about as much an institution as marriage. The causes of this are found in the sickly sentimentalism of our so-called story papers, the representation of artificial life in the scenes of the stage and want of proper instruction as to life's duties and responsibilities from the pulpits. If ever the circumstances demanded a free, bold utterance in respect to the ills of the married relation it is at the present time, and we need expect no better state of things in domestic life till the pulpit, the press and the stage unite in turning the tide in a better direction.

First, it is a mistake for young people to marry simply for beauty. Beauty, often, is only skin deep, and serves as veneering to cover up a deformed heart and soul. Some of the most homely persons we have are inwardly the most beautiful. Such was Annie Steele, the tender poetess of England. Such was Watts, the great poet, of whom a lady said that she admired the jewel but abhorred the casket. Seek, then, for a partner in life who possesses the inner beauties of virtue, truth, and true affection. Such will cause the countenance to be all radaint, not with cosmetics, but with that which will abide amid the stern realities of life.

It is a mistake to marry simply for social position. This marrying of surroundings rather than of a partner is the bane of married life. For a young man to marry from such a base motive is simply to add one to the family, but that one is often a consummate fool, and a cat and dog life is generally the consequence. Those who marry simply external surroundings deserve nothing better than a selfish, calculating, designing woman, who will shoot missiles of anguish and sorrow into their souls all through life. Young men in seeking a wife should look only at the individual. Internal qualities, not external circumstances, should influence them. A girl who helps her mother cheerfully, cares for her brother and is kind and affectionate to her father is one to make a loving wife. A young man who loves and cares for his sister generally has a tender, loving regard for his wife. With such there may be glittering surroundings, but beneath that is the ring of the true metal, which sounds more sweet and harmonious as life progresses.

Motives of wealth too often operate in the selection of life partners. This is the case in respect to both sexes. "Did she marry well?" is often asked—that is, did she marry a long, full purse. No matter how honest, industrious, respectable he may be. There are no terms strong enough to express contempt for any two-legged creature who, not having inherited wealth and not having brains enough to make it, will go to work with cold deliberation to marry it. This having one eye on a woman and the other on her purse is base hypocrisy. Themistocles said he would rather marry his daughter to a man without money than to money without the man. A true man lives for his wife rather than on her. Independence is the prime idea of true manhood. Barter this away by living on your wife's money and you become simply a serf.

In the practical duties of daily life the poor creature who married money and has to live on it undergoes a terrible crucifixion. Married life to him is anything but a paradise. He is always the fawning sycophant or the self-willed tyrant, and in either case the difficulty increases. The trouble was not so much in the act of marriage on his part as in the motives which prompted it. He did not sow affection, hence he did not reap it; but he sowed a sordid selfishness which produced an abundant crop of sorrow, strife and regret.

Young men, banish all ideas of marrying wealth! Earn it, then you will appreciate it and know how to save it. If you cannot bring a dowry of gold to a wife, bring her a pure heart and an untarnished reputation. Bring her what a Greek maiden once said she would bring to her husband, "What gold cannot purchase—a heart unspotted and virtue without a stain, which is all that descended to me from my parents." Get a wife who has what Dr. Watts calls "Wealth above what earth can grant and lasting as the mind." Then will married life be pleasant and agreeable, and the end be peaceful and triumphant.

WIT AND WISDOM.

THE man who "hugged an awful secret to his breast" wore a false shirt-bosom.

DEFECT in manners is usually the defect of fine perceptions. Elegance comes of no breeding, but of birth.

THOMAS NAST, the caricaturist, gets riled whenever he is asked if he's of blood kin to gymnast, the athlete.

IT is with narrow-souled people as with narrow-necked bottles; the less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring out.

"Do you believe in an omen?" was once asked Ned Sothern. "Only when it has a 'w' before it," was the prompt reply.

HE that does not know those things which are of use and necessity for him to know, is an ignorant man, whatever he may know besides.

YOU may be wise enough to be able to say your prayers backward, but if your life is not correct you know what you are, and so do other people.

OF all the actions of a man's life his marriage does least concern other people, yet, of all actions of our life 'tis most meddled with by other people.

THE roses of pleasure seldom last long enough to adorn the brow of him who plucks them, and they are the only roses which do not return their sweetness after they have lost their beauty.

OLD GENT—"Ah, Mrs. B., did you keep a diary during your visit to the country?" Mrs. B., indignantly—"No, sir, I didn't. The family bought milk from the neighbors."

A TWELVE-YEAR-OLD BOY of Franklin, Penn., burst a blood-vessel while blowing a tin horn, and died in a few hours. If this item is of no use to you, cut it out and hand it to your neighbor.—Lowell Citizen.

A SCIENTIST says that in the moon a hickory nut falling from a bough would crash through a man like a minie ball. That settles it. We shall never go to the moon to gather hickory nuts.—Norristown Herald.

BARBAROUS—"W—— H——, professor of crinicultural abscission and crainiological tripsis, tonsorial artist, physiognical hair dresser, facial operator, cranium manipulator, and capillary abridger."

A PHYSICIAN said jocosely to a policeman one evening, "I always feel safe when I see a policeman in the evening, for there is no danger about." "Yes, safer than I feel when I have a doctor," was the retort.

"No, sir," said the young lawyer who was paying attention to a fair maiden; "no, sir, I don't like a circuit court. There's no fun in being chased around the house by a cross dog before getting a chance to dive in the front door."

"I TELL you," said the bad boy, confidentially, to a group of youthful friends, "my mother may seem small—don't believe she'd weigh more than I do, in her stocking feet—but her slippers are heavy, you bet!"

IT is said that Socrates began the study of music only when he was sixty. This fact should be impressed upon the minds of all young ladies who practice the "Maiden's Prayer" long before they are twenty.

BRIDES, as a rule, find it a new and rather unpleasant sensation to accept money from their husbands immediately after marriage. But an all-wise Providence provides for such matters, and in course of time this feeling gradually wears away.

OUT in Manitoba a couple of leading citizens had a race on foot about which there was considerable betting and excitement. The local paper in its heading, "A Foot Race," got in an "l" instead of a "t." This did not suit the competitors to a "t." Such an insinuation was not "l"-egant.—Detroit Free Press.

THE story is told of Senator "Zeb" Vance, of North Carolina, that soon after his second marriage he remarked to his bride: "My dear, I'm a stubborn fellow, and you may anticipate trouble. Now, in the beginning, while I am submissive, I want to give you one piece of advice. If you follow it, we'll get on mighty well. It is this: Make me do just as I darned please."

MGR. CAPEL was asked what struck him most forcibly in this country, and he replied, "The precociousness of children." He says that while in Baltimore the Archbishop took him to call on a lady. While making the visit a boy aged four years came in the room, and his mother said, "My son, speak to the Archbishop." He obeyed readily, and, holding out his hand, said: "How do, Arch?"

POOTS, who is a man of chronic ailments, drops in to see his doctor almost every day about some real or imaginary trouble. Generally he has a very fine line of symptoms of an appalling character with which to regale his physician's ears, but the other day he was stumped when the doctor made his usual inquiry: "Well, what's the matter to-day?" Said Poots, disconsolately: "Well, doctor, I don't know; but I feel so well that I think there must be something awful the matter with me."

EATEN UP.—The Bangor (Me.) Commercial says that a man who owns land that is overflowed by the waters of Pushaw in the spring has made out a bill against the State for the damage which black bass and white perch have done by eating the roots of the grass.

EARS FOR THE MILLION.

Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from a peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges paid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
My hearing is much benefited.
I have received untold benefit.
My hearing is improving.
It is giving good satisfaction.
Have been greatly benefited, and am rejoiced that I saw the notice of it.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1.00, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

A Young Wife's Greatest Trial.

The greatest trial of a young wife's life is the birth of a child, which is usually attended with many hours of hard labor and intense pain. PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH, a new book by Dr. J. H. Dye, one of New York's most eminent physicians, however, shows that pain is not necessary in childbirth, but results from causes easily understood and overcome. It proves conclusively that any woman may become a mother without experiencing any pain whatever. It also tells how to overcome and prevent morning sickness, swelled limbs, nervousness, pain in back, and all the unpleasant sensations attending pregnancy. It answers hundreds of delicate questions about women and their peculiar troubles. Physicians highly recommend it, and say it will do all that is claimed for it. THE SUN: its Constitution; its Phenomena; its Condition. By NATHAN T. CARR, LL D., Judge of the Ninth Judicial Circuit of Indiana. J. Fitzgerald, Publisher, 20 Lafayette Place, New York. Price, post free, 15 cents.

The chief result of Solar Research are ably presented and popularly explained in this little work. But its author is not only a clear expositor of the views of others; he offers an original and consistent theory of Solar Physics, which appears to reconcile many of the conflicting theories and observations of astronomers. For sale at the usual places.

Peculiar to the manufactures of
CURTIS DAVIS & CO.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The reputation of this and other brands of Curtis Davis & Co.'s Soaps has made the name of "Davis" popular in every community in relation to the use of soap. That this reputation has suffered by people accepting almost any kind marked "Davis" is true, but that all may know when they actually do get Curtis Davis & Co.'s goods is the object of this notice. Possessing a pure and superior Washing quality their soaps cannot be sold in competition with numerous brands under the name of "Davis" now on the market. If you want the genuine articles, see that the full name of Curtis Davis is stamped on every bar and wrapper as above.

FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE.

Gibbon's "Rome" was finished in 1787.

THE contents of the November number present a large variety of interesting and edifying reading, and are rich in illustrations. The opening article, by Professor V. L. Conrad, Ph. D., "Luther and His Work," is timely and full of interest. "Lutheriana," "Albrecht Durer," "Sacred Musicians of the XIXth century," "Providence in History," "The Apostle of Greenland," etc., etc., are notable articles. "Mr. Burke's Nieces," a charming serial, is continued, and there are short stories, sketches and essays by some of our most popular writers, lay and clerical. There are poems of great merit; the "Home Pulpit," with sermon by Dr. Talmage, "Footmen and Horses"; the "Collection Basket," "Historical Facts," "Obituaries," "Editorial Comments," etc., and abundant miscellany, amusing and instructive. The price is only 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, postpaid. MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Terms cash. C. H. MARDEN.

Charles W. Spurr shows at the American Exposition, his process for using hardwood veneers. Columns arranged to give the effect of a portico are seen, the foundations of which are pine, and are covered with natural woods, backed with paper laid on with glue. One column bears a card labelled San Domingo Mahogany 1-125 in., in thickness. Others are designated as "French walnut burl," "American walnut burl," "figured ash," "dark laurel burl," "white bird's eye maple," "figured black walnut, etc., each giving the fractional part of an inch, represented by the thickness. The general appearance is that of solid wood and very handsome.

"King Cotton," at the North Carolina exhibit in the American Fair. Mrs. Jackson of Pittsboro, N. C., has practically illustrated her ideal of this powerful ruler, whose influence, emanating from the "Sunny South," is spread over the civilized world. This royal personage, together with his surroundings, is made entirely of cotton, from the crown of his head, consisting of a cotton boll entire, to his beard, knee breeches and shoes, the latter ornamented with gilt buckles. He is seated on his throne, which he has ascended by steps, while each side are curtains looped back with gilt bands. He holds a golden sceptre in his hand, while on the top of throne, is seen a flag staff, holding a flag, bearing the motto, "Cotton is King." A card near says, "for sale," "price, $10." It would be an attractive ornament for any parlor. The background to this interesting representation is a dark colored shield, on which "Mica," from Mitchell Co., N. C., is neatly arranged, showing it to good advantage.

"Verily old things have become new." On entering the "Art Gallery," at the American Fair, the eye of the visitor is caught by the old fashioned clock standing near, and close inspection reveals the fact that it was made in Amsterdam, by Johannis Van Wyk. This is from the establishment of Troopman & Co., whose exhibit is in the left hand gallery. Here the Antiquarian loves to linger, seeing the original article, as collected and imported, of the reproduction of the genuine. "Beaufetts" with glass doors, through which are seen from plates our grandmothers may have eaten, "Secretaries," "chests of drawers," standing high on antique legs, chairs, that Gov. Winthrop may have reposed in, three sided tables, are seen, and a settee, reminding one of that in "Pilgrim Hall," Plymouth, where so many relics of colonial times are gathered together. The clock, seems symbolical, as it ticks the moments away, telling of the labor of time, since these things were new in ideas if not execution.

A reward will be paid at this office, from which it recently escaped, for the return of a full grown gray squirrel with a small scar on his forehead.

Prof. E. C. Taylor, one of the greatest of modern magicians will appear at the Town Hall here for three nights, beginning this evening. He will be assisted by Mlle. Irena in her wonderful performances and also by his Royal Italian Marionette Troupe. At the close of each entertainment 100 valuable presents will be distributed among the audience. Further particulars in another column.

Rensselaer O. Wright died at his home in Plymouth, Wednesday, of typhoid fever, after a brief illness. The deceased was born in Johnstown, N. Y., September 6, 1846. As early as 1862 or 1863 he came to this city and entered the store of Sleeper & Critchett of whom he learned the tailor's trade. He saw service in the Rebellion, and upon his return went into the employ of M. B. Critchett. Subsequently he worked at his trade in Pittsfield and Boston, and later returned to to this city and established himself in business, the firm being Stone & Wright. After a short time a partnership was formed with W. P. Hood, the firm of Wright & Hood continuing for some 3 years. For about two years Mr. Wright was in business alone, after which he removed to Plymouth, where he has built up a good trade. He was made a Mason in Blazing Star Lodge, this city, in 1866; received the degree in Trinity Royal Arch Chapter in 1870; in Horace Chase Council in 1872, and was Master, 1877, 1878; in Mount Horeb Commandery in 1873. He was Master of Olive Branch Lodge, Plymouth, 1881-2; High Priest, Pemigewasset Royal Arch Chapter, Plymouth, from 1882 until his death; Grand Master Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of New Hampshire, 1882. The deceased was very popular by reason of his many social qualities, and leaves a large circle of friends. He is survived by a wife but no children—Concord Statesman.

The funeral of the late R. O. Wright, occurs at the Methodist church at 9 a. m. today, Rev. Mr. Knowles officiating. Olive Branch lodge of Masons will have charge until the remains reach Concord, whither they will be borne on a special train at 10.30. A more extended Masonic funeral will occur there in charge of the commandery. The deceased was representative to the grand lodge and High Priest in the chapter here while his rank was high outside in other branches of the order. His age was about 34 years.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for November is already on our table, a splendid number, with a perfect galaxy of steel engravings, colored fashion plates, colored patterns for the work table, tales, poetry, etc., etc. We do not see how any lady can get along without this charming monthly. With this number appears the Prospectus for 1884. It promises better things than ever; and "Peterson" always keeps his promises. There will be nearly 1200 printed pages, not less than 14 steel engravings, 12 double size colored fashion plates; from 800 to 900 wood cuts; six copyright novelets, one Hundred smaller stories, etc., etc. In short, the magazine will continue to be, as heretofore, the cheapest and best for ladies. The terms are only Two DOLLARS a year. To clubs, it is even cheaper viz: four copies for six dollars and a half with an extra copy of the magazine, as a premium, to the person getting up the club. Or five copies for eight dollars, with both an extra copy of the Magazine for getting up the club, and also a superb illustrated gift book, "The Golden Gift," or a large size steel engraving, for framing, "Tired Out." No other magazine give such premiums. For larger clubs, the price is still lower, while even more premiums are given. Subscribe to no magazine until you have seen a copy of "Peterson". Specimens are sent gratis, if written for, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address either CHARLES J. PETERSON, or PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

For a long time railroad officials have been dissatisfied with the promiscuous time arrangements, and have been looking for means to establish something like a uniform system. At the meetings of the General and Southern Railway Time Conventions held in St. Louis and New York last spring a plan was approved which creates five standards in the United States and the Provinces in place of over 50 which have existed. Each system takes its time from meridians exactly one hour of time or 15 degrees of longitude apart. We are located in the Eastern system, which comprises all that part of the United States east of Buffalo. The meridian of this system is the one 75 degrees west from Greenwich, and it passes almost exactly through the middle of the system. Roads entering this city run by Boston time, which is 16 minutes faster than that on the standard meridian. Consequently to run according to the standard time trains will be run by a schedule 16 minutes slower than Boston time, which is our local time. For example, the train which leaves this city at present at 7:30 a. m., by both local and railroad time, will leave at 7:14 according to railroad time and at the present local time.

It will thus be seen that it will be safe to follow local timepieces as usual. Time tables will be printed according to the new standard, so that the 7:30 train will be advertised to leave at 7:14. If any one misinterprets the matter, and goes to the station at 7:14 by the usual time, the result will only be an extra wait of 16 minutes. The public will only need therefore to bear in mind that they have only to add 16 minutes to the advertised schedule of time to find at what hour by their own clocks trains are to leave and arrive. The object of the change is to secure uniformity, instead of the present "hardscrabble" style, so called. At every 15 degrees across the continent an abrupt and even change of one hour will be made. For example, a train reaching Buffalo at 12, and leaving immediately, will leave at 11. The change will go into effect all over the country it is expected on Oct. 8th.—Concord Statesman.

ASHLAND ALLEGATIONS.

A meeting of O. W. Keyes Relief Corps, No. 8, was held Thursday evening, Oct. 18th, and the following officers installed by Mrs. E. B. Hull Installing Officer: President, Addie S. Hughes; S. V. President, Minnie E. Baker; J. V. President, Anna M. Warner; Secretary, Esther E. Ellis; Treasurer, Clara Perkins; Chaplain, Ellen Dalton; Guard, Susie Ellison.

Poem composed and delivered by Miss Alice Maud Cheney at the recent 12th regiment reunion:

"V-e-t, vet," what does it mean,
Upon your soldier's faded coat?
His hand is hard and rough and brown,
I see a scar along his throat.
His eyes seem looking far off still,
His close shut mouth is firm and grim,
Mother, what means that little word,
Upon a coat so worn and dim?

It means, my child, that rugged hand
Has wielded musket, long and well,
Has sent the iron thunder home,
And tuned the song of screeching shell.
It means that steady, staunch and true,
He fairly won that ragged scar.
While you and I staid safe at home,
And read the news about the war.

What wonder if the mouth be grim
That said so many swift good bye's.
Life's common words are idle breath
Beside those earnest battle-cries.
What wonder if the gaze be dim,
And yonder strangely linger yet,
The eye that has looked straight at death,
His image may not soon forget.

And this is what it means, to earn
The title "Veteran" on a coat;
To march through flood and field, or lie
Where rebel muskets sweep the moat;
To serve the guns in rifle pits,
To sleep beneath the silent sky—
To dream of home, and wake to war;—
To see a comrade drop and die.

To hear and heed the fearful song
That whistling minnie bullets sing;
To faint and fall, and longing lie
For one cool draught from rocky spring.
And this, my child, is what it means,
That little word of letters three,—
Go clasp his hand and give him thanks
For battles fought for you and me.

Below is the address of welcome delivered by Miss Inez Andrews of this place to the surviving veterans of the 12th regiment N. H. V., at their 18th Annual Reunion, at Ashland, Sept. 28th, 1883:

The soldiers and citizens of Ashland give greeting to the Colonel commanding the 12th regiment N. H. volunteers and to the officers and soldiers under his command, on this the anniversary of their departure for the war.

We remember the days of the great war—the heroic achievements of the memorable struggle—and how, out of approaching anarchy the nation gloriously emerged, free from dismemberment, solid and hopeful.

Looking back through the vista of a score of years, the memories are fresh—the vision undimmed and the natural force unabated.

The participators in that great struggle were brave, heroic, and ever to be honored. The nation was saved by their unwonted activity and devotion to good government. And the citizens of these quiet towns, and peaceful villages, and pleasant homes, will never forget the debt of gratitude they owe to the armies of the republic.

While we remember the great armies, and their great and worthy commanders, from McClellan, under whom the forces took form, to Grant under whom they made achievements and obtained surrender—and while we call to mind the capivities, imprisonments, wasting diseases, and deaths of so many men—we do not count the cost too dear, if our nation may henceforth live in pursuit of peaceful industries, and still more peaceful hopes.

The 12th regiment whom to-day we welcome to our quiet town, and our happy homes, had a brave part in the great war—and is commended to all these States, and especially to the citizens of New Hampshire, for the noble marches it made—the brave deeds it did—and the honorable course it pursued, from the day of its muster in, in the autumn of '62, to the day of its muster-out, in the spring of '65.

It was the 27th of Sept., one of the delightful autumn days of '62, that your regiment whose great bravery is well demonstrated, left the State, under the command of Capt. Joseph H. Potter of the regular army as Colonel, for the seat of the war.

Assigned to duty, for a brief time, in the defences of Washington, its subsequent course, to the end of the great struggle, has been carefully noted and pondered upon.

On its flag are inscribed the well contested battles in which it was engaged. No member of the 12th lives to-day, who does not call up, as precious memories of the struggle, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Cold Harbor, and the defences of Richmond.

Your regiment was never known to falter. Its men were true as steel. Its officers did their duty to the bitter end. Its surgeon attained a name, distinguished in the medical record of the army as the executive officer of the largest hospital in the world. Its chaplain was a brave as well as a devout man, who never shunned duty and who fell in its discharge.

Ashland has a just pride in welcoming such a regiment, with such a record, and extends its cordial greeting to every surviving comrade.

To-day, representing the girlhood of this town—speaking the sentiments of its womanhood—and uttering words which the sterner sex gladly commend, we receive and welcome the "Boys in blue," in the fullness of our hearts, in the nobility of our thoughts, to the fireside and the generosity of our homes.

Your ranks are thinned, your years are lessened, but your heroism never tires.

Long may you all survive and late may you go to the peaceful abodes.

One Friday night recently Edward Cheney, employee in one of the Wilder & Co's., mills met with quite a severe accident while trying to run a belt on a pulley. He got his boot in the way so as to break the small bone in one of his legs and wrench his knee quite badly.

The most dangerous fevers are typhoid, bilious, malarious and gastric. These all originate in the stomach, liver or bowel, and may be easily prevented. One of Parson's Purgative Pills each night for a week will drive disease from the system. jesalt

The North American Review for November, by the liveliness and the sterling worth of the articles it contains, satisfies the requirments of most exacting readers. Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island," giving incidentally a highly interesting sketch of the early constitutional history of that little Commonwealth and setting forth the considerations which influenced its people in restricting the exercise of the electoral prerogative. Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, in an article entitled "The Government and the Telegraph," cites the provisions of the Federal Constitution and the determinations of the Supreme Court which appear to debar the General Government from assuming the management of the telegraph lines; and presents statistics designed to prove that the service in this country is both cheaper and more efficient than in any of the countries of Europe where the governments own the lines. The Rev. David N. Utter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged crimes of "John Brown of Osawatomie." There are two scientific articles, namely, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives," by Gen. John Newton. W. H. Mallock contributes "Conversations with a Solitary," an imaginary passage-at-arms between a Radical and a Conservative, in which the two opposing theories of government and society are advocated with rare spirit and ingenuity of argument. In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts going to prove that the clerks and other employes of the government departments at Washington, even before the passage of the Civil Service act were in the main both faithful and efficient. Finally, "Dr' Hammond's Estimate of Woman," is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place and sold by newsdealers generally. jesalt

ANTI-BILIOUS PHYSIC.

STRICTLY VEGETABLE.

☞ Safe and very important in all cases and kinds of Headache, Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Sickness at the Stomach, Liver Complaint, Fevers, Diarrhœa, Foul Stomach, Bowel Complaint, Jaundice, Sour Stomach, Worms in Children, and Costiveness.

HARMLESS AND TASTELESS.

MANUFACTURED FROM THESE WONDERFUL HERBS.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—In introducing the medicine advertised in this circular, I will relate to you how I came by it:—I was taken seriously ill in a neighboring state, when a friend with whom I was stopping, advised me to obtain of a certain apothecary, a dose of ANTI-BILIOUS PHYSIC, which would cost only ten cents. Immediately after taking it, I felt like a new man. I tried to procure the recipe, but could not under any consideration, and so made arrangements with the druggist to furnish me with large quantities of the medicine, which I have kept on hand and sold for many years. As a family medicine, it has given perfect satisfaction in every instance. During this time I have tried several times to procure the recipe, but without success. A short time ago I learned that this apothecary had changed his business, so I again tried to get the recipe for compounding this wonderful and never-failing Indian remedy. After persuasively laboring with him for ten days, paying him a large price, and putting myself under heavy bonds not to reveal the secret, I succeeded in procuring it. He also faithfully promised never to give any person this recipe, therefore we two are the only persons having it in the world.

Now I am prepared to put it up and place it before the public in any quantities, it not having failed in one case in many years of giving entire satisfaction, in the vicinity, where it has been known.

Put up and sold by F. E. MORSE, and his agents for 25 cents per box, containing 1-2 ounce. I will send by mail five boxes, post-paid, for $1.00, or one box for 25 cents, on receipt of price.

Every box warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

☞ AGENTS WANTED in every town at a good salary.

The following are my authorized agents:

Editors of newspapers please publish and philanthropists please notice there is a man named Colby now stopping with R. W. Palmer at 319 West 20th Street, N. Y. He is an invalid with a broken leg; he is 67 years old, he is now being treated by an old eminent physician for several chronic diseases, he has been married 45 years, his wife is also an invalid, having had two paralytic shocks and two congestive chills. They have both been invalids for more than five years, they are worthy and need financial aid. Mr. Colby refers to the genealogies in New England and Illinois. He is the only surviving son of William and Mary Little Colby, well known in Grafton County, New Hampshire and Orleans County, Vermont, from 1810 to 1880. They refer to Mr. John Lewis, Assistant Postmaster at Boston, Mass., Mr. Abram Wakeman, Ex-postmaster of New York City; A. C. Dwinal, of 65 1-2 Clermont Avenue, Brooklyn; Miss Alsea Blaisdell, Housekeeper and Head Nurse in Mr. Robert Bonner's Family, also to Dr. J. H. Jones, who is Superintendent of the home for Incurables at Fordham, N. Y.

Any person who has a few dimes or dollars to spare, please enclose in registered envelope addressed to Moses Franklin Colby, Care R. W. Palmer, No. 319 W. 50th Street, N. Y.

P. S.—Mr. Colby can be seen morning and evening.

The Senate Committee on Education and Labor is now taking testimony with a view to reporting on the condition of labor in this country, and as compared with the condition of labor in Europe, on the cause of strikes and on the proper relations between capital and labor; the object being to ascertain if any laws can be passed to improve the condition of the laborers, to remove the causes of dissatisfaction, and to promote harmonious relations between employers and employees and the varied interests of the country. The investigation is as well of female as of male laborers.

THE WOMAN'S NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE has taken an active part in furnishing evidence in regard to female employees, and has proposed interrogatories to be sent by the State Department to all United States Consuls in Europe.

The object of the LEAGUE is the ipmrovement of the condition of female employees, the securing for women a fair open field for their competion in all industries in which they can be employed, and equal pay for equal work.

This appeals to every woman in the land, as no woman can be assured against the necessity of labor, not only for herself and children, but often for her morrally, physically or financially bankrupted protector. The Press can aid the LEAGUE in this effort.

In your County, according to the last census report, there are large numbers of females above 15 years of age employed in various industrial pursuits.

1. In what industries are they engaged?
2. How does the product of female labor in these employments compare with that of men?
3. What is the average wages paid to females, and how does it compare with that paid to men in the same industry?
4. What is the general condition of life of female employees, and how does their employment affect their condition?
5. Is the employment of females increasing or decreasing?
6. What new industries have been opened within five years to female labor?

By publishing and mailing to CHARLOTTE SMITH, Arlington Hotel, Washington, D. C., or sending written answers to above you will aid in a good cause, and if you send the name of any person who can testify intelligently to these facts, his or name will be submitted to the committee, which has the power to send for and pay witnesses. Respectfully yours, CHARLOTTE SMITH, President.

At the present the railroads are run on fiftythree different standard times, which greatly complicate the time tables for through trains. The new system proposes to substitute four standard times in place of the fiftythree standard times, and thus simplify matters. It proposes that the eastern roads shall be governed by the seventyfifth meridan, which is four minutes slower than New York time. The adoption of such a system would secure uniformity and do away with the perplexitie of travellers who now wear out their brains in futile struggles with those Chinese puzzles called railway time tables. Under the present lack of system a traveller going from Boston to Washington, if he wanted to keep correct time, would have to set his watch frequently. From Boston to Providence he is travelling on Boston time, from Providence to New London on Providence time, from New London to New York on New York time, from New York to Baltimore on Philadelphia time, and from Baltimore to Washington on Washington time. The difference between Boston and Washington is twentyfour minutes.—Boston Sunday Globe.

The first horse railroad was built in 1826-8.

NEWS OF THE DAY

GENERAL ITEMS.

—The trustees of the Garfield National Monument Association at Cleveland, Ohio, invite an international competition, open to all artists, for a monument in honor of the late President Garfield

—Judge Osborn delivered a long charge to the jury, in the Sessions bribery case at Albany, N. Y., and the jury retired at seven o'clock, the Court taking a recess until ten o'clock. Long before that hour the jury had returned, and when the judge arrived a verdict of not guilty was rendered.

—The coal operators, in order to prevent a drop in the price of that necessity, state that no suspension of production will be arranged this month, but that a slight curtailment in the output is probable in the latter part of November.

—The committee of creditors of F. Shaw & Bros., tanners, of Boston, etc., who recently failed, reported at a meeting of creditors that it appeared that the assets of the firm were worth $3,856,000 and that the liabilities were $5,344,000. The firm, the committee believed, could pay seventy-two cents on the dollar.

—The Legislature of Washington Territory has granted the right of suffrage to woman.

—General James B. Steedman, Chief of Police of Toledo, Ohio, died of pneumonia. He was a well-known volunteer officer of the war.

—The Newburg centennial commemoration was both impressive and picturesque. There were over one hundred thousand people in the historic city. Ten thousand troops took part in the military parade, and the thunders of seven United States war vessels anchored in the river gave noble emphasis to the observances. Orations were delivered by Mr. Evarts and Senator Bayard, and Dr. Irenæus Prime invoked God's blessing on the undertaking. Fireworks in the evening brought a day of brilliant pageantry to a close. Troops from New York City, New Jersey, Connecticut and other places took part in the procession. Grand Army posts, Firemen and civic societies also joined it. Everything passed off satisfactorily.

—A colored man in Arkansas appealed to the President against alleged iniquities of the State laws and was informed that the Federal Executive can afford him no redress.

—Tammany and the County Democracy of New York city have united on county nominations.

—The remains of the North Carolina Confederate dead recently exhumed at the Arlington National Cemetery were interred with impressive ceremonies at Raleigh.

Virginia will elect part of its Senate and its full assembly.

A MUTE'S EVIDENCE.

The Remarkable Scenes at a Murder Trial in New Mexico.

A correspondent at Silver City, N. M., writes as follows:

"The jury trying Abel Duran and Aurilia Lora for the murder of Wy Fio, one of three Chinamen killed near Fort Bayard on February 3d last, brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree, pronouncing in their verdict at the same time that the prisoners be hanged by the neck until dead. A deaf and dumb boy, who was the only witness of the murder, did the work and did it most effectually. He went through signs and drew exactly a diagram as on a former trial. He pointed out the defendants as being present as participants in the murder with such overwhelming, convincing certainty as to leave no doubt of their guilt whatever—even to mathematical certainty. The impression left on the minds of the spectators and jury while the little fellow was giving his silent yet unerring and impregnable testimony will never be forgotten by them.

"But that picture! It could not be explained on any hypothesis but that of guilt. It was the only avenue in the world left by which the witness could relate his story and be understood. He drew a picture of the flag at the military post. He placed himself in a position on the paper where he could see the three defendants going to the shanty of the murdered Chinaman. Next he drew a line from where he was standing to the cabin, indicating the direction he went to get there. When he got as far as the house he drew a representation of himself again. He next drew the outline of three men on horseback in front of the cabin door. His next drawing was to indicate the three murdered Chinamen, making three straight marks inside the cabin floor. He then made signs showing that they were Chinamen by reference to their long queues, and showing they were dead.

"He further manifested by signs which were readily understood by his mother, as interpreter, how they were killed, showing the kind of weapons used, in what part of the body the shots took effect, and the manner of using the cleaver. He explained the whole matter fully and clearly in the most minute detail, and after explaining all this he pointed out each of the prisoners with such horrible certainty and self-confidence that the audience, as it were, seemed to breathe a sigh of relief. While he was going through the various motions and signs the spectators and the jury were so intensely interested, and such perfect order and quiet prevailed, that had anyone whispered it could have been heard all over the room. The crowd was not content with remaining in their seats. Everyone was anxious to look upon the countenance of the boy while giving his evidence, and for that purpose stood upon the benches and occupied such other positions as might give them a better view. The testimony was irresistible. There was not a soul present who for a moment entertained the idea that the picture drawn was a fabrication or invention of his own brain.

An Acre of Wretchedness.

With a million to begin with, anybody might soon get as wealthy as Vanderbilt. So says a correspondent of a New York paper. He describes a building in Forsyth street. It is on a lot 25 feet wide by 100 deep. An alleyway of 5 feet runs down one side, and on this the tenements face. The whole house, consequently, is 20 feet wide and 100 feet deep. It is 5 stories high, and is divided into 5 sections, or houses, each 20 feet square. The apartments for a family consist of a living room, 13 feet square, a dark 5x10 bedroom in the rear, and two closets barely large enough to contain two cots for children. There is only one window, and it looks out upon the narrow filthy alley, so that light and ventilation are both scant. There is no water in these houses, the tenants lowering buckets from the windows by ropes, and filling them at a hydrant which is surrounded by foul pools. A drain is choked with rotten vegetables and other refuse. But the uncleanliness is not essential to the success of the writer's proposed enterprise. What he wishes to call particular attention to is the smallness of the homes and the relative largeness of the rentals. The prices range from $8 a month on the ground floor to $5 on the top, or an average of $7 from each of 24 families. There is a groggery in the tenement opening on the street, and this raises the gross income to $10,500 a year. By covering a block with these compact and cheaply constructed houses, about fifteen per cent. clear could be realized on the investment. But that is not all. "I would reserve the exclusive privilege of selling supplies to the tenants," says the schemer; "no other groceries or saloons than mine should be opened in the territory covered by the houses." I went into a Forsyth street store and saw women buying coal at eleven cents a bucketful, or about $10 a ton. Flour was retailing in small quantities at a rate equal to $14 a barrel. For all of their eatables these poor devils pay on the whole fifty per cent. more than can be got from rich folk. Counting in drinkables, don't you see what a fortune could be made out of an acre or two of tenements full of wretchedness?"

HERMITS.—Two sisters have dwelt in a small log hut in the mountains near Indiantown, Pa., for thirty-eight years past, aloof from all other human beings. The two hermits are about 60 years of age. In speaking to each other—for they never speak to others—they sing their words with long-drawn drawls. They are hard workers, and can swing the ax and fell large trees. They have no fear of anything from tramp to bear. They sleep with their axe by the bedside. It is said that both were disappointed in love about forty years ago.

Our Exports.

The Bureau of statistics reports the total value of the exports of domestic breadstuffs for the month of December, 1883, to be $16,192,300; for the corresponding month of 1882, $24,082,301; for the three months ended December, 1883, $45,281,501; for the corresponding period in 1882, $70,091,380; for nine months ending September 30, 1883, $120,430,426; for the corresponding period last year, $134,307,899.

MAMMA'S SHIP.

Which is Supposed to be Coming In.

The Point Lobos watchman of the Merchants' Exchange, San Francisco, was aroused from his monotonous contemplation of the horizon one morning by a faint rap on the lower panel of the door of the station, and upon opening the latter he discovered a rosy-cheeked boy of about five, looking very hot, tired and dust-begrimed, and having evidently made the journey from the city alone and on foot.

"Please, sir, is mamma's ship coming in?"

"What ship is your mother on, my child?" asked the lookout, staring at his diminutive visitor.

"She isn't on any; she's at home," replied the small inquirer, somewhat puzzled. "She has a ship of her own, though, and I want to know if it's coming in?"

"I suppose its father's a captain," said the lookout to himself. "What's the ship's name, my son?"

"Name?" reflected the child; "it has not got any name; it's just mamma's ship, that's all."

"No name?" said the station-man, more mystified than ever. "Who sent you here, little one?"

"Why, old Jim, the sailor, who lives back of our house. He said this was the place where they watched for the ships to come in, and so I thought I'd come out to-day and see if mamma's was in sight. I started this morning, and people showed me the way, but I didn't think it was so dreadful far. Please, mister, won't you look again for mamma's ship?" and the tiny traveler sank down on the doorstep much exhausted.

"What makes you think your mother has a ship?" asked the watcher, as he lifted the child into a chair.

"Why, because she says so," replied the baby, much astonished by the absurdity of the question. "You see, I'm most crazy for a little spotted pony like Charlie Peters has, and—and a red cart to hitch 'Gardo'—our dog—to. But whenever I tease mamma for them, she says I must wait 'till her ship comes in.' I'm awful tired of waiting, so I thought I'd come here and ask you. Don't you think that little one way off there, with the long black tail, might be it?" and he pointed to a steamer smoking along past the Farrallones.

"I guess it will be along pretty soon now," said the lookout, gravely, sighting through his telescope. "Meanwhile, you climb into that berth yonder and take a nap while I watch." And in a few minutes the Merchants' Exchange telephone repeated to police headquarters the message that a lost child would be found safe and well at the Point.

An hour later, when the distracted mother arrived at the station, the truant was still fast asleep, the contented smile on the little mouth showing that he had reached that placid haven, that dreamland port, where, only, all our ships come in.

WHAT DRINK MAY DO.

A Sad Story of Real Life in a Large City.

Stories of the degradation and brutality of men who drink a great deal of liquor are so numerous that the tenderest heart becomes more or less callous to them. Occasionally, however, there is heard or read a narrative that gives point to all that reformers have ever said about the curse of rum. Such a story is published in the New York papers. A man of respectable birth, a husband and father, is said not to have had a sober day in six years; his family has frequently been on the verge of starvation whenever his wife was unable to earn food, and he has, to obtain money with which to buy rum, beaten the woman whom he had sworn to love, cherish and protect. Finally, while his wife was in the severest physical stress to which woman is subject, the drunkard, with a cruel taunt, threw himself upon the bed and body of the sufferer. Within a moment or two a little stranger came into the world and died. The brutal husband has since been committed to prison for six months, but his punishment will not undo any of the harm he has inflicted upon his wife and children. Compared with such a brute a murderer seems a petty offender. Sudden death would be a delightful substitute for the prolonged agony that drunkards' families endure.

"This is the most extraordinary and inhuman case that has been brought before me during my entire career as a Police Magistrate," said Justice Morgan, as he looked at the prisoner. "The charge against you is only for being drunk and disorderly. On this I will fine you $10, but I will also hold you in the sum of $1,000 to keep the peace for six months, in default of which you go to the Island for six months. There is just where you belong, and by right ought to have been sent long ago, and I am very sorry that the law prevents me from sending you there for a longer period. This is the most brutal outrage I ever heard of."

"I am glad he has been sent away to the Island," the brute's wife said. "He cannot harm me now or injure my children. I have lived in constant terror of my life for years past, but now it is over and I can rest. Drink has made him insane, I know, and I wish he might be sent where he could be treated for that fearful malady. My friends will try to obtain a separation for me, and I desire it, for I cannot live with him any longer. Little by little he has gone down, until now no one respects us, and I and my children are forever disgraced. His people have done all they could for him, but it was of no use. He lost one position of trust after another, until now he cannot obtain work anywhere. I have kept starvation from the door for us all until I was taken sick, but now I don't know what will become of us."

Declines It.

General Sherman, having learned that a number of prominent army officers and Government officials in Washington intended to celebrate his retirement to civil life by a banquet, said that he was in hopes that no such action would be taken, as he was desirous of slipping into private life as quietly as possible. With this object, he said, he had declined all receptions and banquets tendered him in New York and Philadelphia, and the only reception he had consented to was that of the old soldiers in St. Louis, in welcoming him back to his former home.

THE CHARACTER OF WASHINGTON.

What is Thought of It After a Lapse of One Hundred Years.

The address of Wm. M. Evarts at the Newburg Centennial concluded with the following impressive words:

"The interest, the reverence, that we feel as we recall these great transactions, as we stand upon the spot where they were enacted, centre upon Washington. Great everywhere and at all times, the part played upon this field in these closing months of the Revolution was not less conspicuous nor complete in its greatness than any manifestation of his life. Had these events closed his public service, had he then forever retired from the great theatre of action and renown, had he never filled out our admiration and gratitude by the eight years of private life and the eight years of the Chief Magistry which followed the surrender of his military command—if his great presence in the framing of the Constitution and in the guidance of the nation by high statesmanship and pure administration—if all this had been wanting to the full splendor of his fame —if he stood to his countrymen in their memory as he stood upon this very spot one hundred years ago, his face would have shone to all the people as did the face of Moses to the children of Israel when he delivered the tables of the law.

"And now, after a hundred years of marvellous fortunes and crowded experiences, we confront the days and the works and the men of the first age of the Republic. Three wars have broken the peace here proclaimed. The war for neutrality to complete our independence, by establishing our right to be at peace, though other Powers sought to draw us into their wars. The war for boundary, which pushed our limits to the Pacific and rounded our territory. The war of the constitution, which established for this people that, for them and forever, 'Liberty and Union are one and inseparable.' These rolling years have shown growth, forever growth, and strength, increasing strength, and wealth and numbers, ever expanding, while intelligence, freedom, art, culture and religion have pervaded and ennobled all this material greatness. Wide, however, as is our land and vast our population today, these are not the limits to the name, the fame, the power, of the life and character of Washington. If it could be imagined that this nation, rent by disastrous feuds, broken in its unity, should ever present the miserable spectacle of the undefiled garments of his fame parted among his countrymen, while for the seamless vestures of his virtue they cast lots—if this unutterable shame, if this immeasurable crime should overtake this land and this people, be sure that no spot in the wide world is inhospitable to his glory, and no people in it but rejoices in the influence of his power and his virtue.

"If the great statesman and orator Mr. Fox could, in the British Parliament, exalt the character of Washington as that 'illustrious man deriving honor less from the splendor of his situation than from the dignity of his mind, before whom all borrowed greatness sinks into insignificance, and all the potentates of Europe become little and contemptible;' if the famous eloquence of Erskine would speak of him 'as the only human being for whom he felt an awful reverence;' if the political philosophy of Brougham prescribed it as 'the duty of the historian and sage of all nations to let no occasion pass of commemorating this illustrious man;' if he asserted that 'until time shall be no more will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and virtue be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington;' if our own great statesmen and orators join in this acclaim,

Nil oriturum alias, nil ortum tale fatentes, let his countrymen with one voice accept and cherish the splendid possession, and exalt and perpetuate it now and forever."

MINING.—John W. Mackey said to a reporter for the St. Paul Pioneer-Press: "Mining is the most precarious business in the world." "You can well afford to say it," the reporter retorted, "with $30,000,000 to your credit. But did you think so in 1869, when you were pushing an ore car in the Ophir mine?" "I knew it then only in theory; for my salary of $4 a day was sure, and my wants were simple. You always hear of the successful miners. The men who disappear and are lost in Pauper alley are not so often quoted."

NO PRINCIPLE is more noble, as there is none more holy, than that of a true obedience.

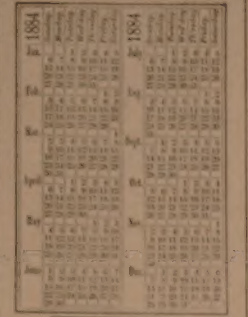
CALENDAR FOR 1884.



THE SIZE OF MAN.—At the anniversary of the Harvard Medical School Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in his speech illustrating the microscopic facilities of the school, said: "A man five feet high, enlarged to correspond with the microscopic power used, would be a mile high, would weigh 120,000,000,000 pounds, and could pick up the State House and chuck it into the sea, cleaning out that ancient structure by a summary process which would put to shame the exploits of Commodus and his kind."

The Little Model Republic.

VALPARAISO, CHILI.—Senor Ricardo Stuven, a leading commission merchant of this city, after having exhausted all other remedies has been completely cured of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-banisher. He makes this public.

THE Chicago Tribune publishes a "personal" directed to the White Stockings. It says: "Do not return and all will be forgiven."

IF you have failed to receive benefit from other preparations, try Hood's Sarsaparilla; it's the strongest, purest, best, and cheapest.

He that does you a very ill turn will never forgive you.

SHEBOYGAN, Wis.—Dr. S. B. Myers says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility, loss of appetite and want of strength.

EGOTISM springs sometimes from self-admiration.

Two-thirds of a Bottle Cures.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir —I have been taking your "Favorite Prescription" for "female weakness." Before I had taken it two days I began to feel stronger. I have taken but two-thirds of a bottle and believe I am cured. Gratefully,

MRS. H. C. LOVETT, Watseka, Ill.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.

My mother began gaining from first dose she took of Dr. Graves' Heart Regulator. She is rid of those bad feelings about her heart now, the relief is permanent, other remedies only helped for a few minutes. Miss Clara Bradt, Lawton, Mich. $1 per bottle.

DARDANELLE, Ark.—Dr. M. M. Croom says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best medicine in the world, and is effecting miraculous cures."

Alms are the golden keys that open the gates of heaven.

SICK and bilious headache, and all derangements of stomach and bowels, cured by Dr. Pierce's "Pellets"—or anti-bilious granules. 25 cents a vial. No cheap boxes to allow waste of virtues. By druggists.

TOO GREAT refinement is false delicacy, and true delicacy is solid refinement.

Home Testimonials.

Go to some good druggist and ask him what he knows of Hunt's Remedy, and he will tell you that it is the best kidney and liver medicine made, and one that has stood the test of time. Look over most any paper and you will find home testimonials of people living right in your own city who know whereof they speak. Below will be found one of a lady resident of Bridgeport, Conn. Her full name and address are given. Any one doubting the genuineness of it has the liberty of calling on or addressing her, and, as she says, she will be only too glad to tell her experience with, and opinion of, so valuable an article.

"I willingly give my testimony in favor of Hunt's Remedy. I first heard of it a few years ago while living in Springfield, Mass. I knew a lady there who had suffered for a long time with kidney disease. She used everything she could hear of, but with poor success, and finally hearing of Hunt's Remedy began using it. Well, it cured her. About this time I moved here. After I had lived here a time, from other sympathetic disorders my kidneys became afflicted and weak. Knowing that Hunt's Remedy had greatly benefited many others I began using it, and it gave me the desired benefit. Were I obliged to use any medicine of the kind again I would prefer it to all others. I consider it a sure cure.

"If by the publication of this, my experience with Hunt's Remedy, others suffering from similar complaints can be induced to avail themselves of its good effects, you have full liberty to do so in any way it may seem best to you. Gratefully yours,

"MRS. FLORENCE L. WOOD,

"175 Broad Street, Bridgeport, Conn."

Vice and wrong degrade us.

MENSMAN'S PEPTONIZED BEEF TONIC, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It contains blood-making, force generating and life-sustaining properties; invaluable for indigestion, dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility; also, in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, overwork or acute disease, particularly if resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Humor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia and chronic diarrhea is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases, with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Wonderful cures are effected by this medicine, which is a specific for all catarrhs and flow of vitiated humors. Sold by druggists. $1 a bottle of 100 doses.

SINCE LAST OCTOBER I have suffered from acute inflammation in my nose and head—often in the night having to get up and inhale salt and water for relief. My eye has been, for a week at a time, so I could not see. I have used no end of remedies, also employed a doctor, who said it was impure blood—but I got no help. I used Ely's Cream Balm on the recommendation of a friend. I was faithless, but in a few days was cured. My nose now, and also my eye, is well. It is wonderful how quick it helped me. MRS. GEORGIE S. JUDSON, Hartford, Conn. (Easy to use. Price 50 cts.)

Carbo-lines.

The winter blast is stern and cold,
Yet summer has its harvest gold;
And the baldest head that ever was seen
Can be covered well with Carboline.

MR. J. EAGER, importer, 34 Cliff St., N. Y., tells all his sick friends if they take three bottles of Dr. Elmore's R.-G. and it fails to cure them, he will pay for it, because three bottles cured his wife and other friends.

A child that wakes with croup should have a dose of Piso's Cure.

FOR sore feet, swollen joints, sprains, corns or bunions, use St. Patrick's Salve.

CELLULOID collars and cuffs are cheapest in the long run. They wear longer than any other, and you save cost of washing.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and as its name indicates is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, Pa., and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

25c buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners, makes a boot or shoe last twice as long.

On Thirty Days' Trial.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above.—N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

The Frazer Axle Grease

is the best in the market. It is the most economical and cheapest, one box lasting as long as two of any other. One greasing will last two weeks. It received first premium at the Centennial and Paris Expositions, also medals at various State fairs. Buy no other.

The Remarkable Success

DISTINGUISHING the History of Hood's Sarsaparilla is no more conspicuous than its superior merit as a medicine. In Lowell, where more Sarsaparillas are manufactured than any other place in the world, ten bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla are sold to one of all the rest. Hood's Sarsaparilla promotes the purification of the blood, by a process peculiarly its own, unknown to, and unattainable by, any other preparation. While it is the best, it is also the cheapest; its one hundred doses for one dollar defy competition.

Living Witnesses

MRS. J. L. DENNIS, High Bridge, New York city, says: "I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my household, and think it far exceeds any other preparation of Sarsaparilla."

A nursing mother, MRS. [illegible] C. [illegible], N.H., writes: "I have taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I know it has done me a great deal of good while nursing my baby."

The Secret of Living.

Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup will cure Scrofulous Taint, Rheumatism, White Swelling, Gout, Goitre, Consumption, Bronchitis, Nervous Debility, Malaria and all diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood.

The merits of this valuable preparation are so well known that a passing notice is but necessary to remind the readers of this journal of the necessity of always having a bottle of Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup among their stock of family necessities.

Certificates can be presented from many leading physicians, ministers and heads of families throughout the land indorsing it in the highest terms. We are constantly in receipt of certificates of cures from the most reliable sources, and we do not hesitate to recommend it.

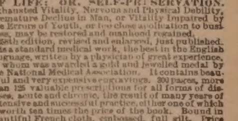
MANHOOD!



KNOW THYSELF.

A Book for Every Man!

Young, Middle-aged and Old

THE untold miseries that result from indiscretion in early life may be alleviated and cured. Those who doubt this assertion should purchase the new medical work published by the PEABODY MEDICAL INSTITUTE, Boston, entitled THE SCIENCE OF LIFE; OR, SELF-PRESERVATION. Exhausted Vitality, Nervous and Physical Debility, Premature Decline in Man, or Vitality Impaired by the Errors of Youth, or too close application to business, may be restored and manhood regained.

238th edition, revised and enlarged, just published. It is a standard medical work, the best in the English language, written by a physician of great experience, to whom was awarded a gold and jewelled medal by the National Medical Association. It contains beautiful and very expensive engravings. 300 pages, more than 125 valuable prescriptions for all forms of diseases, acute and chronic, the result of many years of extensive and successful practice, either one of which is worth ten times the price of the book. Bound in beautiful French cloth, embossed, full gilt. Price only $1.25 by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Illustrated sample six cents. Send now.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE; OR, SELF-PRESERVATION,

is beyond all comparison the most extraordinary work on Physiology ever published. There is nothing whatever that the married or single can either require or wish to know but what is fully explained. —London Lancet.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE; OR, SELF-PRESERVATION,

is a marvel of art and beauty, warranted to be a better medical book in every sense than can be obtained elsewhere for double the price, or the money will be refunded in every instance.—Author.

N. B.—YOUNG and MIDDLE-AGED MEN can save much time, suffering and expense by reading the Science of Life, or conferring with the author, who may be consulted on all diseases requiring skill and experience. Address

WOMAN AND THE BABY.

What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy

How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster!

How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows!

How the child grows, and is heavier and heavier every day.

And yet she lifts him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night.

Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid.

Brown's Iron Bitters help worn and weary women into new life, cheerfulness, and vigor. Tell all the mothers you know. 9
